

author as environmental advocate:

Is nature writing itself a kind of activism?

If so, what is the impact and who is the audience?

a conversation with

Kathleen Dean Moore, Ph.d

Friday, April 28, 2017

12 noon – 1:00 PM | ENR2 S225

Join us to explore nature writing's place in environmental advocacy. This informal session with environmental advocate, philosopher and nature writer Kathleen Dean Moore will offer a conversation for writers, scientists, philosophers, social justice workers and all who use the written word to engage, motivate and influence our collective well-being. Discuss how to identify your audience and understand the impact of creating messages that celebrate the natural world -while it changes before our eyes- and break our hearts open to move forward with engaged compassion toward all living beings.

Open to all students, faculty and staff.

Questions: sbs-cbctinfo@email.arizona.edu

More Events with Kathleen Dean Moore at compassioncenter.arizona.edu/events

COLLEGE OF SOCIAL & BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES
Center for Compassion
Studies

THE UNIVERSITY OF ARIZONA
Institute of the
ENVIRONMENT

COLLEGE OF SOCIAL
& BEHAVIORAL SCIENCES
English

Creative Writing Program